Anthony W. Ivins Reviews Pas- Much Activity Has Been Shown sages to Show Conformity With Bible.

VOLUNTEERS IN THE CHOIR TINPLATE PRICES HIGHER

An exposition of the Book of Mormon and a defense of its Christianity in accord with the Bible, was the sub-In accord with the Eible, was the subject of an address at the tabernacle yesterday afternoon by Anthony W. Ivins of the quorum of apostles. Mr. Ivins reviewed many of the passages in the book accepted by the Mormon church as the Word of God, illustrating its conformity with the Bible in prophecies concerning the advent of Christ, his divine mission and ministry on earth and the doctrine of salvation as preached by Christ.

Christ.

In the absence of the Tabernacle choir, music was furnished by volunteers from the various ward choirs of the city and former members of the regular choir. The singers were led by Evan Arthur and Tracy Y. Cannon was at the organ. John R. Winder of the first presidency of the church presided and prayer was offered by Angus M. Cannon, patriarch.

Mr. Ivins said one of the fundamental beliefs of the Mormon church was in the divinity of Christ and his mission on earth and in the Bible, with all of its prophetic utterances and historical revelation. Along these lines he said there was no chance for any difference of opinion between the Mormons and those of other Christian denominations. The Mormons, however, go farther than that by accepting the Pook of Mormon. For that reason, he said, the church has been called the Mormon church and its people were called Mormons, because the Book of Mormon was written by one of that name.

He said the Mormons judge a tree by

Book of Mormon was written by one of that name.

He said the Mormons judge a tree by its fruits and in that manner the Mormon people judge the Book of Mormon. He said it would be difficult to convince a person who had partaken of good fruit that the tree from which it came was bad. On the other hand, if a person had partaken of bitter fruit, it would be as difficult to convince that person that the tree on which the bitter fruit was borne was a good tree.

Just by that standard he said he would judge the Book of Mormon. If it was not a good book; if not in accordance with the Bible and in full accord with the other revelations concerning the will of other revelations concerning the will of God, it should be rejected. Conversely if the Book of Mormon was in complete accord with the Bible and its teaching of morality and righteousness and the accord with the Bible and its teachings of morality and righteousness and the plan of salvation as laid down by Christ, it should be accepted as a good book. In this manner, if the Book of Mormon corroborates the faith of the Mormon and contains the things near and dear to the hearts of the people, corroborating the word of God as found in the Bible, it must, therefore, be a good book.

Objections to the Book.

The speaker said objections had been raised to the Book of Mormon because it came into the world in this latter dispensation through the agency of Joseph Smith. It had been said that the canon of the Scriptures had been filled in the Bible, but to this statement the speaker replied that that which simply corroborated did not add to not take from. He said others had objected to the Book of Mormon because it had come into the possession of Joseph Smith through miraculous means or through means other.

Denver, Aug. 22.—Further desultory debating in the forestry reserve controversy marked the last hours of the trans-Mississippi commercial congress, and with the adoption of a resolution prepared by Thomas Patterson, former United States senator from Colorado, the sine die adjournment took place.

One of the last actions was the adoption of a resolution calling upon congress to repeal the 10 cents per pound tax upon oleomargarine. There was some objection voiced by the dairy interests, but this faded away when the oleomargarine representatives offered no objection to the representatives offered no objection to the oleomargarine stamp on all imitation butter.

The Patterson resolution calls upon call imitation butter. that the world had criticized the Mormons for their acceptance of the Book of Mormon, saying that the world already had the Bible and another addition to the Scriptures was entirely unnecessary.

Mr. Ivins read from the title page of the Book of Mormon, illustrating that the first purpose of the book was to convince all people of the earth that Christ was the Son of God. He said one great criticism of the book was the statement that it led people away from Christ, and then read several passages from the book, beginning with the vision of Nephi in which he saw the Virgin Mary and the infant Christ.

This was followed with the reading of that it led people away from Christ, and then read several passages from the book, beginning with the vision of Nephi in which he saw the Virgin Mary and the Infant Christ.

This was followed with the reading of other accounts and prophecies relating to the coming of Christ. These passages, Mr. Ivins said, related directly to the divinity of Christ and were all in full accord with the Bible, and they were features of the Book of Mormon wind appealed most to him personally.

Reading further, Mr. Ivins said that the divinity of Christ and his whole service on earth were set forth in the Book of Mormon exactly in accord with the Bible, and set forth stronger than any other written record in existence. The Book of Mormon, he said, was the strongest witness for Christ and God that has been written since the record in the Bible was written.

In view of this statement Mr. Ivins said he did not see how any man or woman in Christendom could object to the Book of Mormon. He said it taught morality and uprighteousness in every page from beginning to end, and that it would make better men and woman if all would heed the admonitions contained in its pages.

Reading further some of the passages that urged uprighteousness and morality, the speaker asked if that was not good
